Nevada City Host To 250 Club Women

Music, Excursions, and Inspiring Addresses To Mark 3-Day Meet

Romany Rendevous, Motor Trip Out Tahoe-Ukiah Highway, Picnic at Lake Vera for Juniors, Recreational Features of the Conclave

More than 250 women from 11 Northern California counties will attend the convention of the northern district California Federation of Women's clubs Thursday, Friday and Saturday in this city. "Coming Together to Give and to Receive," has been selected as the convention theme. Mrs. W. B. Rider of Sacramento, northern district president, will preside.

The meetings will take place in the Elks hall and Methodist church in Nevada City, the opening program to begin Thursday morning with Mrs. Paul C. Alexander, of San Francisco, state chairman of public health, being the speaker.

Mrs. Alexander will tell of her personal experiences in clinic work in San Francisco. Reports will be given by chairman and officers. Mrs. Charles Elliott will give vocal selections.

ARNESEN TO TALK

One of the highlights of the session will be a talk Thursday afternoon by Dr. Eilas Arnesen on "The Contemporary Novel." Dr. Arnesen is professor of English at the State Teachers College in San Francisco.

Another interesting afternoon feature will be choral competition for a northern district cup and the Helen Reid Siddons cup. The northern district cup will be awarded for the first time to the club choral doing the most outstanding work, and the Helen Reid Siddons cup is offered annually for the club which during the year has given the most significant contribution toward the advancement and appreciation of music.

This cup was given by Mrs. Neill Siddons Hall of Sacramento, in memory of her mother. A tea for delegates will follow, with members of the Nevada City Civic club acting as hostesses.

MRS. SANFORD TO TALK

Mrs. Maxwell Sypher of Chico will be chairman of a concert which the Grass Valley octet will give Thursday evening. George von Hagel, of Sacramento, will present cello numbers, and Ruth Rowland Bryan, contralto, will sing, accompanied by Maxwell Sypher.

"Club Life in Brazill," will be the subject of a talk to be given by Mrs. George B. Sanford, of Sacramento, Friday morning. District presidents and department chairmen will report at this session.

During the afternoon, Miss Josephine Seaman, of La Jolla, state president, will be the speaker. A scenic drive will follow the meeting.

Mrs. Thomas H. Richards, of Chico, past northern district head, will act as toastmistress at a banquet which will take place in the evening. Mrs. Belle Douglass is chairman of the affair.

The Romany Rendevous Friday evening bids fair to be one of the finest of social events. Gipsey costumes are being put together and the demand for earrings is great. Some surprises are in store for the members in the speeches and stunts of various clubs and the decorations will be unique and quite in accordance with the theme of the affair.

Accomodations for singers at the concert on Thursday evening are confined to the choir loft of the Methodist church, but the seating capacity of the auditorium does not permit of a public gathering so the committee will allow one invitation for each club member and all visiting club women will be welcome as well as a few guests invited especially in appreciation of favors shown the club.

PICNIC AT LAKE VERA

Saturday morning's meeting will be devoted to the junior membership, with Herbert C. Davis of Sacramento, speaking on "Ghost Cities of California and Nevada." A picnic at Lake Vera will follow. Here a steak bake under direction of H. E. Kjorlie will be one of the features of the picnic. Through the courtesy of Camp Fire officials, certain buildings at the Lake will be opened for the occasion and the affair will be an event of much enjoyment if weather conditions permit.

An instrumental trio composed of Cadwalader Goede, violinist; Miss Helen Sully, cellist, and Mrs: G. K. Sully, pianist, will entertain during Saturday afternoon. Mrs. Raglan Tuttle, of Nevada City, will give a dramatic interpretation. This meeting will bring the convention to a close.

Miss Estelle Phillips, of Sacramento, has arranged the program and Mrs. Florence Kjorlie, of Nevada City, is chairman of arrangements.

CIVIC CLUB ATTENTION!

Members of the Civic club will take notice that the Convention will open Thursday morning, the 19th at 9:30 o'clock. The adult public is invited.

Thursday afternoon the Choral Contest will be held at the main auditorium of the Methodist church. All club women welcome.

At close of session, visitors will be taken to the Empire Country Club for tea and visit to the mine. Local club members will be provided with transportation if committee is notified before noon.

Thursday evening at the Methodist church, a concert arranged by the District Officers. Club members entitled to one invitation only. No charge.

Friday session at Elks hall, adult public welcome. Late afternoon a drive for visitors.

Friday evening Romany Rendevous at the National Hotel 6:30 o'clock for members of Federated Clubs only. Prior reservation imperative. Gipsy Costume.

Saturday morning, Junior Clubs program, public invited. Children under sixteen will not be admitted.

Saturday afternoon, regular session open to public, closing at 4:30.

M. A. BRAND,
President.

The airport is stressed both from an economic and scenic point of view, the municipal swimming pool in its lovely park is described, and historic landmarks of the city and vicinity are noted, along with the historic personages who in past years have shed their lustre upon this city.

"BOB" JEFFORD OUT FOR CORONER

Announcement is made in this issue, of the candidacy of L. R. "Bob" Jefford, Grass Valley and Nevada City mortician, for the office of Coroner, of Nevada county, at the Primary Election, to be held on Tuesday, August 28, 1934. The political card of the candidate will be found in the political column of this issue.

In an interview yesterday, Mr. Jefford states that he is seeking the office of Coroner on the merits of a conscientious performanance of duties, economy of maintenance of the office and the capability of fully being qualified to handle the affairs of the office.

"Bob" Jefford has been a resident of Grass Valley for the past seven years, during which time he and his late father formed the firm of W. R. Jefford and Son Funeral Directors. Upon the death of the senior member of the firm, the present candidate for office has conducted the business, both in Grass Valley and Nevada City.

That he thoroughly understands the requisites of the office he seeks is demonstrated in the fact that he served the coroner's office of Summit county, Utah, under his late father, was a member of the coroner's office at Columbus, Ohio, and locally served as deputy coroner under Thomas M. Harris, during the years 1927-1928. Mr. Jefford is a graduate of the Columbus Training School of Embalmers.

The candidate is a home owner in Grass Valley.

During the period from now until the August election Mr. Jefford stated that he will attempt to make a personal house-to-house campaign so that he may meet all of the Nevada county electorate and more fully explain his campaiggn for election to the Cononer office.

YOUTH PLEADS GUILTY TO RECKLESS DRIVING

H. Costa, a youth of this city, appeared before Justice of the Peeace Walter Mobley this afternoon, and pleaded guilty to the charge of reckless driving. The court fined him $150, suspended the fine during good behavior and warned the offender that any infraction of the vehicle act in the future would result either in collecting the fine or his serving 75 days in jail.

WOW! WHAT PRICES LONG WHISKERED 49ERS PAID FOR BEAN SOUP!

It cost the Forty Niners a lot of money to eat. When one considers that most of them wore the stylish long whiskers of the period, the price of soup seems especially appalling. Here is the bill of fare as the first gold seekers found it, according to historical documents cherished by the Nevada City Chamber of Commerce:

MORE LOGS READY FOR SCOUT HALL

About 60 poles were peeled yesterday at the Nevada City airport for the new Boy Scout Lodge.

Eight Boy Scouts went up Saturday evening and spent the night camping on the airport site. They peeled 15 poles before the Veterans of Foreign Wars, council members, citizens and other boy scouts arrived. Among the boys making the overnite trip were Junior Assistant Scout Master Albert Pratti, Bob Small, Bob Snyder, Carl Tobiassen, Jr., Bob Grant, and Ainsley Fouyer.

There still remains between 20 and 30 poles to be peeled.

CWA Work Completed, Its Cost, Reported by Director, Fred Miller

ARCHITECT HERE TO STUDY BANK BUILDING SITE

Mr. L. J. Hendy architect of the Capital Company, of San Francisco, spent today in Nevada City, getting data on the old Shamrock Cafe and the rest of the site where a building is to start soon for the Bank of America. He has been taking measurements and pictures and is studying the site very carefully.

It is expected that the Bank of America, which purchased the site last fall, will start the tearing down of the old buildings and begin the erection of their new bank very shortly.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Irate Senate Rebukes Huey Long, Then Gags Him; Jobs and Wages Highest Since 1931; Senate Rejects Higher Normal Income Tax Rate.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HUEY P. LONG, the vituperative senator from Louisiana, was soundly spanked by the senate Thursday. Their patience exhausted, Democratic leaders united in administering a sound rebuke for his conduct on the floor. The proceedings were without recent precedence in the senate. Following the blistering remarks hurled at the Kingfish, the senate clamped upon him temporarily a parliamentary muzzle that reduced him to silence.

Senatorial veterans could not remember a similar occasion when a senator has been subjected to the humiliation of such a public chorus of disapproval from his colleagues. The Louisianian's behavior in the senate has disgraced him in the eyes of the nation, Senator Pat Harrison (Dem., Miss.), told Huey.

The Kingfish screamed his protests. He shouted that Senator Harrison was the kind of man who "would stick a knife in a friend's back and drink his blood." This brand of abuse brought Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson (Dem., Ark.), Senator Bennett Clark (Dem., Mo.), and others to their feet and the senate rules were invoked to stop the mouth of the yelling Long. He sat down and sulked in his chair.

The senate has fumed for days as the excitable Long put on his typical exhibitions, shouting to the galleries. Thursday found almost the entire body in a wrathful revolt against these displays of temperament which have been hampering the consideration of important bills.

THAT Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the air corps, and others acted in "violation of the law" in connection with the proposed purchase of $7,500,000 worth of army airplanes, is the conclusion of a subcommittee of the house military affairs committee that has been investigating the matter. The subcommittee also found that Harry H. Woodring, assistant secretary of war, had attempted to assure competitive bidding for the airplanes and thereby comply with the law and the intent of congress.

Gen. Foulois

The transaction in question dates back to the first of the year. Army officers, asking a public works allotment to buy airplanes, made arrangements to purchase them from special companies without competitive bids.

Woodring, the committee decided, intervened and demanded competitive bids be sought. Specifications were drawn and proposals submitted to the industry for bids. But the army judge advocate general held the proposals did not assure competitive bidding.

The committee contended that in so far as it had been able to find, Woodring's every act was to assure free competition, yet his desires were thwarted.

It mentioned, in addition to Foulois, Brig. Gen. Henry Conger Pratt, chief of the army air corps' procurements division. It said Foulois gave testimony before the Rogers committee and an appropriations subcommittee which seemed to conflict.

CONTINUED improvement in business activity during February and March and expansion of employment and pay rolls to the highest point since the latter half of 1931 were announced by the Commerce department in one of its most optimistic reports on business since 1930.

The average weekly wage was $19.81 in February, the highest since 1931. The hourly rate of 55.8 cents per hour was within 4.1 cents of February, 1929. The employment improvement was general throughout manufacturing industries. Seventy-seven of the 89 manufacturing industries reported increased employment in February and 79 reported higher total wages. When classified into 14 major groups only the food group did not make an employment or pay roll gain.

"SOAK the rich" forces were defeated Thursday when the senate rejected an amendment to the revenue bill by Senator La Follette, Wisconsin Republican, for a big increase in surtax rates.

The vote was 47 to 36. The party lineup showed 25 Democrats, 10 Republicans and one Farmer-Laborite for the amendment, with 30 Democrats and 17 Republicans against it.

Estimated to produce $185,000,000 additional revenue, the La Follette amendment called for a boost in the normal income tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, with surtaxes graduated up to 71 per cent on net incomes in excess of $1,000,000.

TO PREVENT extreme demoralization in the industry and not to create an artificial shortage, is the intent of the production control proposals submitted to the dairy industry by the farm administration, administrators asserted in an appeal for national support for the plan. The case for limiting milk supplies was presented in a series of articles prepared by the AAA. Officials said it would be easier for them to let the dairy problem work itself out by natural processes, but it would mean starvation for the farmer.

They pointed out that the proposed plan would affect some 4,500,000 farm families, whose income had been cut in half during the depression and whose products had been selling at 40 per cent below prewar "parity."

It is proposed that dairymen limit their output to conform with sales quotas to be allotted under the program. For their co-operation they would be paid benefits derived from collection of an estimated $165,000,000 in processing taxes, $15,000,000 of which would be earmarked for even distribution among three supplemental relief plans, involving tuberculosis eradication, purchase of surplus milk to feed undernourished city children and transfer of good cows to poor farms.

THE house of representatives got busy Wednesday, suspended its rules and granted quick approval to three important bills dealing with widely divergent subjects. They were:

The administration sugar bill—subject of heated controversy for months—which slid through to final approval without even a record vote. It includes sugar as a basic commodity under the AAA, quotas domestic production of sugar beets and cane, and gives Secretary of Agriculture Wallace power to quota imports of Cuban and insular sugar.

The so-called Johnson bill, prohibiting foreign nations which are in default on private or national obligations in this country from floating their securities in the American market. The measure is the upshot of a senatorial investigation several years ago into the nature of foreign borrowings in the United States.

A resolution ordering a federal power commission inquiry into rates charged for electric energy by private power companies throughout the country.

IMMEDIATE comprehensive revision of the national railway labor act to expedite and enforce the settlement of disputes between the railroads and their employees and to safeguard the right of collective bargaining, was recommended by Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, in a letter to Representative Sam Rayburn, chairman of the house interstate commerce committee.

J. B. Eastman

His outstanding recommendations were these:

The creation of a new national board of adjustment, divided into four independent parts, whose awards would be enforceable in the courts.

The substitution of a new national mediation board of three members for the present board of mediation of five members.

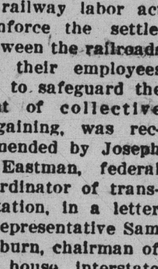

The inclusion of all companies which operate equipment or facilities or furnish service included within the definition of the terms "railroad" and "transportation" in the interstate commerce act.

Provisions similar to those in the temporary emergency railroad transportation act of last year, insuring "the complete divorcement of railroad employees and managements in the choice of representatives to deal one with the other" and providing adequate means for the enforcement of these provisions.

The national adjustment board would be divided into four independent parts to adjust disputes.

A "COMMON sense recovery plan" was laid before the country Thursday by France's aged premier, Gaston Doumergue.

The program, which was officially approved by a special council of ministers at Elysee palace, is comparable in scope with Russia's five-year plan and America's NRA. It reflects, however, the typical distrust of experiments by the French peasant. It is marked by the same simplicity and absence of ballyhoo which has characterized all of "Gastounet's" actions since the dramatic February morning when he arrived in the Civil war littered capital.

Gaston Doumergue

The French program is based on the theory that if the government puts its own house in order and minds its own business, industry will recover by itself.

It all boils down to a question of restoring confidence, but the methods laid down for achieving this purpose are nothing short of revolutionary for France. The keystone in Doumergue's edifice of recovery is the leveling of government expenditures down to income, which means eliminating immediately the budget deficit of some $270,000,000.

GENERAL JOHNSON said at his first press conference in six weeks that he favored allowing the licensing provision of the National Recovery act to expire in June.

The general's attention was called to a report that the President favored extending the licensing arrangement, which had not yet been invoked in a single case, and he indicated that he would be at the service of the President for further discussion of the matter.

Inquiry in administration quarters concerning the recent report of the federal trade commission on the operation of the steel code led to the information that General Johnson would reply to this report shortly. The general is said to hold views diametrically opposed to those of the trade commission respecting the regulation and supervision of business by the government.

ACTING under the power delegated to him by President Roosevelt under an executive order, National Recovery Administrator Johnson approved an amendment to the bituminous coal code imposing a five-day week of 35 hours and revising its wage scale upward, figured on a $5 base with differentials, on the entire bituminous coal industry. The amendment is subject to a hearing on April 9. Authoritative sources in Washington agreed that the operators would accept the amendment, at least until after the hearing and that the threat of a strike is avoided at least until after that hearing by the action of the NRA head.

Gen. Johnson

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, issued a statement praising the action of the administration and promising the co-operation of the union.

THE liberal Spanish republic has discarded one of the major pillars upon which it was built. Marshaled by the nominally moderate Radical party that once was violently anti-clerical, the cortes in an uproarious session put 7,500 clergymen back on the payroll of the state for life.

For three hours before passage of the law, which directly violates article 26 of the republican constitution, Premier Alejandro Lerroux's supporters and the shrunken left opposition hurled insults and waved fists at each other. Left filibusterers were ready with some 300 amendments, but the gag rule was voted before a single one was proposed.

SAMUEL INSULL, fugitive utility magnate, has learned that Uncle Sam has long arms. He thought himself safe aboard the chartered freighter, on which he escaped from Greece, anchored at Istambul, but Uncle Sam's long arm tagged him and he was arrested by the Turkish authorities. The council of ministers immediately ordered his extradition to the United States. Two eminent Turkish lawyers on behalf of Insull filed an appeal with the supreme court of Turkey against the extradition order. But the appeal was denied.

Unless the former utilities magnate is able to perform some new wonder, his year and a half flight almost halfway around the world has been brought to an end.

ROME witnessed one of the most magnificent Easters in its long history as the capital of Catholic Christendom. To the usual imposing Easter ceremonies in St. Peter's cathedral were added this year, by special will of Pope Pius, the solemn liturgical rites canonizing Dom Giovanni Bosco, humble Turin priest. Easter also ended the holy year proclaimed by the pontiff in commemoration of the nineteenth century of the crucifixion. Eighty thousand people pressed inside St. Peter's for the canonization ceremonies and the pontifical mass afterwards, and nearly 300,000 more were estimated to have crowded into St. Peter's square. Among the crowds were 100,000 on pilgrimages from many different countries.

THE Civil Works administration has gone out of existence, and this relief organization became the works division of the Federal Emergency Relief administration.

Under this title it will use some $600,000,000 remaining from its recent grant of $950,000,000 for the year 1935 to provide relief for states, which are in turn to pass the money along to cities and counties.

For a month district agents have been working to perfect the machinery for the change.

Meanwhile, administration officials made it clear that industry was not expected to take up the whole slack of unemployment, absorbing the former CWA workers, in a day.

REPRESENTATIVES of the flour milling industry decided to operate without a code of fair competition. Their rejection of the NRA and AAA marks the first refusal of an entire industry to accept the administration's recovery plans. The decision to go ahead without NRA affiliation came after nearly nine months of fruitless negotiations with the NRA and AAA officials.

Government officials were represented as considering a legal test if the millers do not reopen negotiations. There was some talk that the millers might be put under a license.

The millers contend that the code offered would have brought ruin to the industry and would have forced up prices of flour beyond the ability of consumers to pay.

SYNOPSIS

Ranceford Kershaw, last male member of the Kershaw clan, dies suddenly while riding with his daughter, Lorry. At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife christens Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley, a Texan, settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water for irrigation. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, Forlorn Valley banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. He proposes to play Nate against Lorry, assuming that they are carrying on the old feud, in this way getting control of the key lands necessary to the project. Nate, however, has no intention of carrying on the feud.

The deputy sheriff rolled a comical eye at the editor. "I haven't seen the boy since he was in high school here, but from what little I know o' his tribe I should say none o' that breed ever made a threat. They made promises—an' kept 'em."

"I sized him up that way," the editor replied.

After eliciting from Brainerd all the news the latter had, Mr. Rooney strolled away to distribute his tidbit of gossip around Valley Center. Almost the first place he went was to the bank of Valley Center. Henry Rookby, in charge during Babson's absence, received him.

"I see young Nate Tichenor's back in the country. An' Rance Kershaw's kicked the bucket. Died o' heart disease right smack in front of the Bar H gate, an' Nate Tichenor an' Lorry Kershaw 've been in town together an' thicker'n thieves."

"When the cat's away the mice'll play, I suppose. Who told you all this?"

"Brainerd. Tichenor was in an' gave him the story."

"That Nate Tichenor's a bad lot," Mr. Rookby murmured darkly. "I never liked him. D'ye mean to tell me he's around with Lorry Kershaw now, helping her out in her trouble?"

Mr. Rooney nodded.

"The hypocrite! He's back here to smash the Kershaw outfit. Not another reason in life, Bill. Rance Kershaw's estate must owe Tichenor more'n three hundred thousand dollars an' for the past three years old Rance has been using clam shells and woodpeckers' heads for money. Interesting situation. Very interesting."

When he turned to wait on a customer Mr. Rooney continued on to the Valley Center garage to discharge another load of his interesting information.

Arrived back at the Circle K headquarters with Lorry Kershaw, and Miss Lizzie Bachman, Nate Tichenor, after the fashion of a rural neighbor, did the chores. He realized that, with the men all away, Lorry would have had to do them.

He ate his dinner in silence, for both he and Lorry were acutely aware of the presence of Miss Bachman and distrusted her. After dinner he kindled a log fire in the living room fireplace. He was a straight, well-set-up young man, not overly thick but muscular; he had a little crescent out of his left ear and a faint white scar about three inches long ran across his left temple and disappeared into his hair. His teeth were strong, even, white and well cared for. His nose, thin and high and a fraction too long, tended to spoil what would otherwise have been a handsome face, but lent to him an air of distinction. It was the nose of a thoroughbred, a thinker. His eyebrows, heavy and almost black, were a bit overhanging, thus giving to his glance an expression of alertness and directness, particularly when he asked one a question.

Lorry had already observed that he moved with quick, precise motions, like one very sure of himself and in the pink of physical condition.

About eight-thirty the nurse retired; as her bedroom door closed behind her Nate Tichenor arose, shoved an easy chair toward the fire and waved Lorry into it. He remained standing until she had seated herself.

"Too bad your father wasn't here when I called this morning. I might have preserved his life for many years." Tichenor snapped his fingers. "Kismet!" he murmured.

"We thought you were waiting until we got in so deep we couldn't swim out, then you could smash us more easily."

"Had I chosen to smash you a long time ago there was nothing to stop me. You were helpless."

"Then why didn't you?"

"I didn't need the money and I knew I could always protect myself. I could have gotten the ranch at 25 per cent of its value. As a matter of fact, I did plan to buy your mortgage. Surely you do not think I am so careless as not to have kept a close watch on the Kershaws."

"Your people always wanted all of Eden Valley, of course. So you planned to buy the mortgage and foreclose."

"No, I planned to buy it and hold it, because only in that way could I be assured the Kershaws wouldn't be annoyed. I planned to give you time to work out of the jam you are in; then, if you couldn't make the grade, I planned to buy your outfit, lock, stock and barrel, at a fair price. Owen was dead, your father was a cripple and you couldn't operate the business—"

"Of course I could operate it," she challenged. "And I shall. The cattle business is bound to recover. It's getting better every day. Within two years beef will be selling at ten cents on the ranch."

"I do not doubt that. Who is your father's foreman?"

"I am. Since graduating from the university in 1921 I have operated this business. I do a man's work. I know cattle and I know my job. I can ride, rope, and brand and I bust my own saddle stock. I hire and I fire. I've had to do it."

"Had I Chosen to Smash You a Long Time Ago There Was Nothing to Stop Me."

"And you want to keep on doing it?"

The girl nodded.

"Well, carry on."

"I cannot unless you buy the ranch mortgage to protect me—and yourself, otherwise it will be foreclosed."

"In a few days," he suggested, "go to see Babson and say that I am inclined to grant you additional time provided he will do the same."

"I can't understand why you are so kind."

"It's a fault I inherited from my father." A tiny smile flitted around his firm mouth. "Your grandfather tried hard to be neighborly to my grandfather but my grandfather was hard-boiled and mean and stupid and wouldn't play the game; as a result he spoiled all subsequent opportunities for his clan. It's my chance now and I have a curious yearning to make good, particularly since it will not cost me anything," he added bluntly, as if ashamed of his chivalry.

"I thank you more than I can say. We've been paying the bank in Valley Center 12 per cent on our unsecured loans."

"Well, 12 per cent is legal in this state, Miss Kershaw. However, strike Babson for a reduction to 7. Give him an argument. You may win. Babson's probably as hard as a picnic egg, but he may have an unsuspected soft spot."

"I wish I could agree with you, but I find that impossible. Our ranch was mortgaged to a San Francisco bank, but recently Babson bought it from them—"

"He has a hen on," said Nate Tichenor, "and I'll have to find out whether it's a Bantam or a Plymouth Rock. A coward and a potential crook. Money-mad. A schemer. Miss Lorry, he wants the Circle K ranch. When he ascertained from my attorney that the Bar H was not for sale, he decided to acquire the Circle K, so immediately he purchased your mortgage."

"But why has he developed this sudden interest in Eden Valley?"

"I do not know, but I intend to find out. However, he'll never own the Circle K. Whenever you find yourself unable to hang on to it, I'm the rightful heir to it. Understand?"

"Perfectly. You're sure you will not permit him to crowd me? Sure this isn't a generous impulse because you find me in such a sad case today? An impulse you may, with reason, regret next week?"

He drew a checkbook from his inner breast pocket, went to her desk and signed a check in blank. "You fill that in for what your father's estate owes Babson and his bank," he ordered curtly, "and secure me with your promissory note."

She tossed the check in the fire. "What's your interest in me?" she demanded. "I can understand sympathy and gentlemanly kindness but not a blank check that could be filled in for nearly two hundred and ninety thousand dollars."

"I met your brother, Owen, in France. It was before Cantigny, I was the chief of No. 4 section of my battery, and my gun got bogged in a small shell-hole in the road. The teams were new, half-trained and unused to draft—and the drivers were worse, so I had a lot of plunging and tugging—no co-ordinated effort—and there we stuck. There was an infantry regiment resting by the side of the road, and pretty soon a private came up and told the green lead driver to dismount and let him try. I saw by the way this doughboy soothed the excited horses that he knew horses—so I took the place of the driver on the swing team. Fortunately, I had a good driver on the wheel team, so presently, with the cannoneers and spare drivers at the wheels and pushing behind, we gathered our teams and made one steady, concentrated pull—and the gun came out. And when the infantryman dismounted from the lead team, Owen Kershaw and I recognized each other. I said: 'Thanks, Kershaw. I'm obliged to you. Good luck to you.'"

"What did Owen say?" the girl asked softly.

"Nothing, Miss Lorry. His face sort of twisted. You see, we were all exhausted and hungry and thirsty and we'd been through a lot of mud and blood and I suppose we each had the same thought—that the Hensley-Kershaw feud was a pitiful thing. I know I had a vision of Eden Valley just then. Perhaps Owen did, too, because he commenced to cry silently; and then he came toward me and I commenced to cry, too. We didn't say anything, because there was nothing to say; just leaned against each other and thumped each other's backs and were quiet about it. Owen walked beside me up the road a little, his arm through mine; and finally he said: 'Nate, maybe my dog tag will beat me back to Eden Valley. But if you take care of yourself, you're liable to go back with both your dog tags; and when you do, call on the old man and Lorry and tell them it's an order from me that you're to stay for dinner.'"

"Did he say anything about the water?"

"Yes, he said we were to have it and that he'd write home about it as soon as he got the opportunity. So I told him you'd already promised to let my people have it and that pleased him. And I promised him I'd be a good neighbor and fight as hard for the Kershaws hereafter as our clan had ever fought against them. That affected him very deeply and he dragged me off the road and we swore blood brotherhood, each to the other—and then we embraced like two sentimental Frenchmen and were ashamed of it because we were both hillbillies—and I went on with my section and he went back and flopped with his weary squad—and here I am, and I've been a long time getting here."

"Why did you delay, Nate?"

"I kept remembering him"—he pointed to the bedroom door—"and how he spoke to me that morning I came to ask for the water. I was afraid he'd never understand—so I thought I'd wait and not bother him and gradually inculcate in him the belief that I wasn't a bad sort of citizen. I see now that was poor strategy."

"Life," the girl said drearily, "is a game that is played to be lost."

His hand strayed over and imprisoned hers. "Poor little sister!" he murmured. "So hopeless and bitter—and the sun just rising over Eden after a long eclipse. Life may be a game that is played to be lost, but we'll play it like sportsmen and go smiling to our defeat."

CHAPTER VI

Nate Tichenor slept at the Bar H that night, but returned to the Circle K early next morning, with two men he had picked up in Valley Center. He set them at once to the task of digging Rance Kershaw's grave in the family cemetery, Lorry Kershaw pointing out to them the desired spot. About noon the coffin arrived from Valley Center and he helped the man who delivered it place Kershaw in it. Then he lunched with Lorry and Miss Bachman. At one-thirty he and Lorry hitched a team to a wagon and he drove it around and tied the team in front of the house. At two o'clock the girl met his inquiring glance bravely and said:

"We might as well proceed, Nate. Nobody's coming to my father's funeral."

With the aid of two of the hired men he carried Rance Kershaw out to the wagon and, mounting the seat, drove his late enemy on the latter's last pilgrimage, while Lorry, Miss Bachman, and the two laborers followed in the Kershaw car. At the grave Tichenor read the funeral service, the men covered the grave, Tichenor gave them each a ten-dollar bill and with Lorry and Miss Bachman returned to the house.

He was rather proud of the manner in which Lorry had carried on, even though he had expected her to exhibit the traditional courage of her clan.

"That Affected Him Very Deeply and He Dragged Me Off the Road and We Swore Blood Brotherhood."

Throughout the remainder of the afternoon he sat with the two women in the ranch house veranda and was talkative to a degree only excusable in his own mind because he had the customary masculine belief that it was his duty to keep Lorry's mind off her troubles. Evidently Miss Lizzie Bachman was similarly inspired. He enjoyed (and was certain Lorry did also) the efforts of Miss Bachman to elicit from him information as to his comings and goings since he had left Eden Valley. For three hours he withstood her assaults; then, weary and discouraged, excused himself and motored back home to the comforting presence of his silent valet.

Antelopes Are Among Most Deceitful of All Wild Animals; Despise People

Visitors to zoos have nothing but kind words and sympathy for one group of animals on exhibit—the antelopes. The graceful build, expressive eyes and the dainty manner in which they handle their food and step around their enclosures perhaps is accountable for this. Yet the truth is, says a writer in the Detroit News, that there is no single group of wild animals more feared by their keepers and of a more vicious and treacherous nature than these same creatures, be they gnus, hartebeests, waterbucks, Blesboks, reedbucks, impalas, oryxs, springbucks, kudus or any one of the dozen or more "gentle-eyed" gazelles.

There is hardly a zoo in existence that has not recorded either serious or fatal encounters with these animals.

Antelopes are among the most deceitful of all wild animals. They may appear kind, gentle and lovable and stir a desire on the part of the spectator to pet them. Apparently they are the personification of contentment and trustfulness, but lurking under their hide is a lasting desire to kill, which is likely to assert itself at the most unexpected time. This is one lesson directors of all zoos try to drive home to their animal keepers. Never trust an antelope under any circumstances. A buck deer, during the rutting season, may be dangerous, but its attack is a gentle breeze compared with a cyclone when likened to an antelope at any time of year.

Antelope do not need our sympathy. They live by right of hoof and horn and are likely to use both at any time on anything that resembles man.

Hair Worms

Hair worms are objects of curiosity, not only to those who know their habits, but also, to people unaccustomed to seeing them. The life-history of the hair worms is by no means complete. It is known that the eggs are laid in water, and that the young worms begin their lives as free moving animals, which enter the bodies of aquatic insects, which in turn are eaten by fish. After a time they are passed out of the fish's stomachs into the water. After this, little is known, until they are found as parasites inside insects of various kinds, such as beetles, grasshoppers, crickets, etc. They are not poisonous.

Dulse Is Seaweed

The name dulse is commonly applied to two species of edible seaweed which are largely distributed over the coasts of northern Europe and the Grecian archipelago. In Iceland, dulse is stored to be eaten with fish; it is dried and eaten raw or cooked in Scotland and Ireland.

Help Our Traffic Officers

Every now and then some motorists narrowly escapes death in a collision with a drunken driver. He is so heavenly thankful to be alive after the collision, and the drunken driver is so profuse and tearful in his apologies and promises of repairing the damaged car, that the motorist who almose receives a ticket to the perly gates, declines to prosecute the offender.

Or the motorist, who takes the jolt at the receiving end of the drunken drivers errati career, does resolve to prosecute the offender, but never does, because the drunkard (1) in his sober moments is popular, or (2) is politically well connected, or (3) belongs to one of the first families of Nevada county, or (4) offers to make it jolly well worth the smashee's time not to prosecute.

Meantime our traffic officer, who is being sternly directed from Sacramento to pu tan end to drunken driving in Neaada county, does his tart. He makes the arrest, gathers the evidence and is ready to give his testimony and evidence in court.

In perhaps 50 percent of the cases, the little matter of felonous driving is "fixed up" and hushed up, out of court. The friends intervene, bills of the injured motorist are paid, and the drunken driver not ony pays no fine, or spends no time in jail, but is not required to give up his automobile for a single day as the result of the escapade. The drunkard is free to drive his Juggernaut on the highways.

Thoughtless people who read about the accident, note that nothing ever happens to "good fellow" who loves to drive while drunk, and blames the traffic officers or the courts. The same thoughtless persons when they escape a crash with their lives, proceed to shirk their duty to their fellow citizens, refuse to prosecute and permit the bibulous death's head to continue his jittery menace on the highway.

No one thirsts for the blood or for the revengeful punishment of drunken drivers.

But this much should be done to every drunken driver. He should lose the right to drive for just one year after the traffic officer has caught him driving a car while intoxicated.

AND A GREAT MANY PEOPLE ARE BECOMING CONVINCED THAT THE STATE TRAFFIC OFFICERS SHOULD BE GIVEN THE DISCRETIONARY POWER TO DEPRIVE ANY DRUNKEN DRIVER OF HIS CAR AND THE RIGHT TO DRIVE FOR ANY TERM THAT SEEMS APPROPRIATE in their judgment.

Judge and Mrs. Raglan Tuttle had as week end guests their son Pierson, and Miss Donna Colvig, students at the College of the Pacific, who played in the band concerts in Nevada City last week.

The Rose Dress Shop was moved into the remodeled Native Sons building Sunday. The artistically arranged pastel shades of material under an electric light Sunday evening, was a most pleasing sight.

TIRE BLOWS OUT; OAK SAVES WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. A. M. Lattin had a very narrow escape from a fatal accident last Friday while driving at about 20 miles per hour, coming down from Alleghany, and a trie blew out on a turn. She landed against a big oak tree saving a fall of many hundreds of feet with herself and car.

She escaped uninjured but the car needs a new tire, repairs on the fender, steering wheel, assembly, and radiator.

Mrs. Lattin is still shivering over the terrible experience. She says she had heard of hair raising occurrences, but she doesn't believe she will bo able to comb her hair for a week.

Cabbages and Kings

By CHRISTIAN ANDERSEN

Don't let anyone tell you that there is a rift in the ranks of the Democrats in Washington. Franklin D. Roosevelt, despite his recent apparent defeat in the overriding of his veto of the Federal officers supply bill, has not lost one tiny bit of the respect he has enjoyed since becoming President. There are editors galore in this country who lie awake nights listening for the slightest squeak in the well oiled Democratic machine. So far the noise they have heard has evidently been the tumultuous grinding of the own stupendous brain wheels turning to the task of breaking down the unity of the American people and their President.

I do not think that the administration is infallible, but I am like a lot of other patriotic citizens, my confidence is in the President and his advisors, certainly not with those who evidence that their patriotism is measured by the amount of personal gain which they hope to squeeze out of present conditions.

Certain writers seem to get the inspiriation out of the fact that occasionaly a few babies are born out of wedlock. They still cling to the long outmoded idea that bacause a girl has loved too well but not wisely, that the girl and the child should be kept away from all decent people, as someone afflicted with a contagious dieease from which society must be protected lest they become contaminated. Perhaps I am a bit modern but I feel this way about it, a girl who has made the aforesaid error needs the help of her parents and if she has none, then by society in general. The child who has no responsibility for its advent into the world certainly should be treated as well as any other child. Of course, no one advocates or encourages illegitimate births but if they do happen, as they will, let only those who have never sinned, throw the first stone.

Two weeks ago I mentioned in this column that a dangerous accident hazard exists at the junction of Main and Commercial. I don't know who is responsible for this condition, but I should feel very much like trying to collect damages if something should happen to one of my children at that corner. It is an easy matter to remedy the condition and surely it should be taken care of.

Perhaps there is no ordinance governing the throwing of handbills and the like in peoples yards, but the practice is certainly obnoxious and should be stopped. I hope, as in other cities, that there will be an ordinance framed to stop this litter from being thrown into the street and in the peoples' yards.

We spent $1.00 for a pair of tickets to the May Day Fete, at the Firemen's hall on May 1st. We expect at that entertainment to revive some memories of earlier days in our own life and after the show there will be a dance at which we expect to shake a mean foot or two. Then, too, part of the proceeds go to the firemen's fund for the purchase of the hall.

CROSS CUTTERS SHOW UNIQUE IN ITS FEATURES

In the Cross Cuts program, to be presented at the Veterans Memorial Building, in Grass Valley tomorrow night under the auspices of the Methodist church, genuiness is a strong factor. The actual anvil used by John Studebaker in making wheel barrows for the gold miners at Coloma and Placerville, in the days of '49, is used in the studio daily. Too precious to be moved around, an exact replica is shown at the Cross Cut program tomorrow night.

In order also to give realism to the Southern picture, actual Alabama mocking birds were imported. An actual cross cut saw and an actual log are used.

The program at the Memorial Building tomorrow evening, shows both the Alabama Woods as it is imagined and as it actually is. Three machine loads of people and properties bring to Grass Valley this personal appearance of the Cross Cutters. The cast includes the four Negro singers and wood-sawyers, Laurance L. Cross, a stage director, and whenever possible, Mrs. Laurance L. Cross, who is called in the radio picture—"The Little Missus."

Nonsensical Lore

Dedicated to certain enterprising journalists who are striving to dramatize the non-existent "Gold Rush of 1934."

We have read his tales of the city
And usually rated them "fair;"
But he's prospecting now on the Mother Lode
And his methods are debonaire;
He sprinkles his trusty Corona
With a substance we call "fool's gold,"
And strives to embroider the present
With the colorful threads of old.

He seeks to recapture the romance
And the spirit of forty nine,
When gold could be found at the grass roots
And every gulch was a mine;
Ere the gravels yielded their treasure,
The rivers their golden sand,
And the brood of the giants staked new claims
In a silent and unknown land.

Where our pioneers scratched the surface
We have builded a roaring mill,
Or driven a timbered tunnel
Through the heart of a rugged hill;
We have sunk our shafts to new levels,
In earth's caverns we delve for ore,
The rules of the game have changed you see,
Since our fathers played it of yore.

The old time sluice and rocker,
The long-Tom, pick and pan,
Are seldom linked with a golden hope
In a modern miner's plan;
And so, when our author tells us
Of "the Gold Rush of thirty four,"
We know he's indulging in pipe dreams
And writing nonsensical lore.

"The machine age is taking away a vast number of jobs," said the mechanic.

"Don't I know it?" affirmed an office man. "It cost me my job."

"How is that?" inquired the first speaker. "You have never done any mechanical labor, have you?"

"No," he admitted, "but I got my job when the Republicans were in power; and now the Democratic machine has taken it away."

His Share

"What happened to that young fellow who was proposing to marry your daughter?" asked Gadon.

"Him!" sneered the father-in-law. "Immediately after he married the girl, the bounder touched me for five hundred pounds."

"You got something back from him, I suppose?" said Gadon.

"Yes, a week later," said the other; "my daughter."

They were discussing winter sports.

"By the way," said the young bachelor, "can you tell me why the word 'skis' is nearly always pronounced 'shes'?"

"Yes," he said. "Probably it's because a novice never knows what they are going to do next."

"No; he asked me how little I could run one on."

Soil Erosion Problems Call for Settlement

Practically every part of the country has one or more serious problems to meet relating to erosion or stream flow, according to the United States forest service.

Almost three-fourths of the total forest area of the United States has major or moderate influence on watershed values. The varied and complex influences of climate, forest type and condition, and character of soil on stream flow and on erosion must be carefully determined, says the forest service, if forest-land management is to meet watershed-protection requirements.

Marked changes are taking place in the course of many streams, foresters report. Undesirable soil movement is taking place on great areas of watershed land. Both are largely the result of improper use of forest, range, and farm land. Watershed problems to be faced in the immediate future include supplying abundant pure water for domestic and industrial purposes and irrigation, regulated stream flow for water power and navigation, and prevention of floods and soil erosion.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

Housewife's Time Is Money

Labor-Saving Food Preparations and Proper Kitchen Equipment Will Do Away With Much Unnecessary Work in Cooking Meals.

The business-woman housekeeper (and occasionally, as well, the housekeeper who has no outside job but a big one in her own home) is always looking for interesting and time-saving dishes. She appreciates labor-saving devices both of equipment and of method for her kitchen.

She knows that the timeworn phrase "time is money" is true. She is willing to expend necessary time to get good results but she begrudges unnecessary minutes in the kitchen.

Sometimes she has an open mind and will try new products, such as pie crust, biscuits and cakes, all ready to add liquid and bake, or even biscuits all cut and ready to put in the oven, and if she finds the results good, she will continue to use them. One of the latest additions to this group of foods, the ready-to-bake biscuit, has become very popular. The ready mixed pie crusts differ in quality, but one or two of the brands give very good results. Several mixed griddle cake and waffle mixtures are satisfactory.

Usually a flavored gelatin is a standby for a foundation for desserts. Some of the ready-to-use "puddings" are good, but they differ greatly in quality. It is hardly necessary to mention the dependence upon canned soups, vegetables and fruits which the canny housekeeper keeps as staples.

Another product upon which she depends for adding interest, as well as for saving time, is the large range of crackers and cookies which will keep fresh so long in their tin containers. The change from one kind of cracker to another gives a new attitude toward a soup or a salad repeated two days in succession in the menu.

Crackers and simple cookies will find another use in furnishing us the ingredients for quickly made desserts. "Refrigerator" puddings of crumbled graham crackers, dates and whipped cream has long been a standard dessert in many households. A newer idea, however, is the graham cracker pastry which is so quick and so certain. It is made by rubbing crackers fine and combining them with melted butter and a little sugar. You then have a mixture with a crumbly appearance which looks like anything but pastry. It can, however, be pressed into the pie pan and baked either with or without a filling. It cuts well and has a delicious flavor. It is at its best filled with whipped cream flavored with sherry.

Crackers have other uses which make them useful for quick meals—the most useful of which is probably in supplying crumbs at short notice for scalloped dishes, croquettes and other dishes which demand crumbs. The cookies will aid the dessert problem in other ways than in supplying us the accessories to other desserts. The chocolate, ginger or other sweet cookies make quick desserts if crumbled into whipped cream. Here are some of these quick recipes:

Graham Cracker Pastry.

12 graham crackers
½ cup butter
1 tablespoon sugar

Roll or crumble crackers fine and mix with softened butter and sugar. Butter pie pan and press mixture firmly with fingers again bottom and sides. Fill and bake 25 minutes in slow oven, 300 degrees F.

Quick Ginger Charlotte.

1 cup cream
1 tablespoon sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
10 ginger snaps

Whip cream stiff and add sugar and vanilla. Coarsely crumble ginger cookies and fold into the whipped cream. Heap lightly in sherbet glasses.

Lemon Souffle Filling.

3 egg yolks
1 cup sugar
1 lemon
Pinch of salt
3 egg whites

Beat egg yolks and combine with one-half cup sugar. Add juice of lemon and grated rind and salt. Stir over hot water until thick. Add stiffly beaten egg whites to the other one-half cup sugar. Fold into the lemon custard. Turn into pastry shell and bake 25 minutes in slow oven, 300 degrees F.

All Meteors Cold When They Reach the Earth

Meteor authorities, due no doubt to the readiness of ordinary folk to believe practically anything of stones from the sky, are among the most skeptical people on earth. Recently we reported their disbelief in yarns about near-collisions between meteors and airplanes. Now it must be revealed that they also put no credence in yarns about houses, haystacks or other objects being set afire by them.

Dr. Charles C. Wylie of the University of Iowa, writing in Popular Astronomy, says there has never been an authenticated instance of a meteor setting fire to anything. Moreover, the popular idea that meteors are incandescent when they strike the earth is likewise an error. Their surfaces may reach incandescence for a few seconds high up in the atmosphere, but they are soon slowed down so much that passage through the air cools rather than heats them. They stop glowing at an altitude of several miles, and are cold when they strike.—Literary Digest.

"Two things I wanted-

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal—and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just a so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores...in two convenient sizes...the larger is more economical.

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system; or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem:

Here's a boy who gets good marks, has time and energy for play. He is never ill, hardly ever has so much as a cold. When he does show any symptoms of being sluggish, his mother knows just what to do. She gives him a little California Syrup of Figs—and that is all. It's a natural, fruity laxative that is agreeable to take, and its gentle laxative action comes from senna. Parents are urged to use just pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says 'California'.
